Have a nice day and take care A: Do not use apostrophes in regex, as they are special characters. Use \s instead, which means "whitespace characters". This is an example: Regex r = new Regex("[A-Za-z]"); string s = r.Replace("Hi, 123 my beloved", "Hi, my beloved"); The documentation for Regex.Replace says: ReplacementString, if non-null, will be replaced with the results of applying this regular expression and MatchEvaluator to the input sequence. So you need to tell the regex library what to do when it encounters a "special character" (the apostrophe). You do this by escaping the apostrophe by putting a backslash in front of it: string s = Regex.Replace("Hi, 123 my beloved", "Hi, my beloved", new Regex("[A-Za-z]")); A: Try string s = Regex.Replace(text, @"\B[a-zA-Z]\b", " " + " " + @"\B[a-zA-Z]\b"); Regex means "look for a line of text that consists of all lowercase letters, then followed by a space, and followed by a line of text that consists of all lowercase letters, then followed by another space". \B means "start of a word". Of course, if you have a single non-letter letter in your text you will need to make the needed adjustments. Edit Consider the following program: String input = " this is just a test that I have written and its test"; String output = Regex.Replace(input, @"\B[a-zA-Z]*\b", " " + " " +
